

WITH THE FARMERS

Farm Bureau Official Information

TWIN STORMS HIT GROWING CROPS

Grain flattened in many sections—Corn will recover, say farmers.

Two severe storms—high winds and drenching rains—have changed the aspects of harvest conditions in many parts of southern Wisconsin. The twin storms of Sunday and Monday nights caused heavy damage to growing crops, bending down the fields of oats, rye and barley, knocking down corn and in a few instances injuring the tobacco plants. In the Stoughton district there was hail for a short time. The tobacco has not advanced sufficiently to be greatly damaged by hail.

Storm freaks were noted on the prairie section, one field being badly flattened by the wind and rain and in an adjoining field only nominal damage.

Corn Knocked Over. The corn has been knocked over but farmers predict that it will straighten up within a week in the event of favorable weather. Cultivation has been delayed in many places.

The oats were damaged the most, huge swathes being laid flat and the crop advanced to a stage where there will be little opportunity of recovering enough so that the cutting machines will obtain the maximum results. Matted down close to the ground the mower will be unable to pick up the flattened grain.

Can't Cure Hay. Given the best hay crop in years farmers are having the worst time to properly cure and harvest. From the time the hay was ready to cut there has been too much moisture and considerable of the hay was still lying in the fields. The damage to crops is the value of the rain to pasture lands, often times threatened by drought during July and August.

PRODUCERS INCREASE BUSINESS 59 PERCENT

A summary of the business for the six months ending June 30, 1924, shows a steady increase in the number of farms and the volume of business. The National Live Stock Producers' association, while complete figures for each of the 12 terminals are not available, the report shows a 59 per cent increase in the number of cars handled during the six months ending June 30, over corresponding period for 1923.

Statistics handled 45,791 cars of livestock valued at $61,016, 251.43 during the period from January 1st to June 30th of this year. For the corresponding period of 1923, the figures were 28,707 cars and for the same period during 1922, 3,322 cars were handled. The following tables show in detail the business of the live stock terminals for the period covered by the summary from January 1st, 1924, and June 30th, 1924:

S. DAKOTA BUYER INSPECTS HERDS HERE

G. W. Crossman, Washington, D. C., is in Rock county Monday inspecting the Milking Shorthorn herds with the view of selecting a herd bull and heifers for starting a milking herd of Shorthorns on one of the farms owned by the federal government.

"Crop conditions in the Dakotas are satisfactory," declared Crossman. "There has been too much rain there as elsewhere. Farmers in South Dakota are getting away from wheat, going into a more diversified agriculture. They are growing splendid corn and alfalfa and should have success with dairying."

Crossman expects to confer with his two brothers with the view of buying Wisconsin cattle. Keeping beef Shorthorns on two of the farms and a milking herd on the third farm.

"Rock county is the first place I ever visited where you could see a farm and actually see the value of what cows would produce. At every farm I visited, the owner brought out the milk records. This has been our trouble, for seldom could we find out what a cow would produce except by appearance and guess-work."

FLETCHER ELECTED TO SUCCEED HULL

Bangor Man New Head of Farm Bureau Federation of State.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS] Madison—The board of directors of the Wisconsin Farm Bureau Federation, in addition to naming O. C. Fletcher, Bangor, as president of the county, as president to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of George W. Hull of Whitewater, who is now a candidate for the state senate, elected a vice-president and three members of the board of directors.

Hugh A. Harper, Lancaster, Grant county, was chosen vice-president to take the place of William Olson, Monroe, who resigned to become a candidate for the assembly from his county. Frank Tillison, Lake Mills; E. F. Coldren, Juda, and William Mann, Waubesa, were chosen as members of the board of directors.

The change of president and vice-president is in accordance with the by-laws of the farm bureau, which provide that when any officer of this public office, his position automatically becomes vacant. It was because of vacancies so created that the election of a new president and vice-president were made necessary.

LABOR BUREAUS ARE BLAMED FOR ALIENS

Cleveland—Ancestral precedent does not influence the immigrant coming to make his home in America. It is a survey of foreign consulates here is conclusive. Statistics show that natives of European countries, despite most of the hostile agricultural heritage, locate in cities and engage in industrial pursuits.

There are many reasons for this, according to the consuls. The Czechoslovak consuls blame foreign employment bureaus to a certain degree. These bureaus, he says, bring natives of his country to direct employment in industrial centers, principally for steel mills. Landing at the steel mill with people of his own kind, the native remains. Many who are unable to speak the English language, choose to live in foreign settlements in cities where their native social life can be maintained.

Consuls were unanimous in their opinion that immigrants would better be settled by settling in agricultural centers. There they can learn the language and customs of America.

Police Hive Bees

Beilin—"Maid for everything" is what the Berliners call their fire department, and the firemen justified it when they recently caught two swarms of bees right in the city.

As a matter of fact, the department is equipped for this unusual duty with proper masks and a balloon shaped net. One swarm settled in a tree in Potomac Plaza, which is the Fifth Avenue and 42nd street of Berlin, and being somewhat angry annoyed pedestrians. The other swarm settled in a residential district and in both cases the firemen gathered them in deftly while the crowds applauded.

"FORGOT PAST," SAYS DEVALERA. Dublin—Five thousand people greeted De Valera at a reception at the Mansion house here last night. He asked his followers to forget the immediate past and to show no bitterness.

SECOND PAYING MIXER ARRIVES

Will Use Two Machines to Speed Big Milton Avenue Job.

Paving of Milton avenue will not be completed by fair time, according to J. J. Stoney, city inspector on the job with the R. H. Hurdall & Sons Construction company. It is doubtful if any of the street will be open to traffic until after that period, although it was at first hoped to have it finished then.

The big concrete mixer used on the Fourth avenue job broke down Saturday afternoon, so that the last stretch on Fourth avenue near Fifth was not completed until Monday. About 200 square yards of concrete was poured on the job Monday morning.

Equipment Is Moved. The equipment was moved Monday afternoon to Fourth avenue between Main and North Main streets. Paving was started on the south side of the street and 512 square yards completed.

It is probable that pouring on Milton avenue will be started either Tuesday or Wednesday from Milwaukee avenue. The Fourth avenue job could not be completed on the north half due to the freshly laid concrete on the opposite side.

Pouring of concrete on Milton avenue will be started on the east side. The stretch will be completed excavated and rolled by the time the pourers are on the job.

Excavate Milton Avenue. The east side of Milton avenue from Prospect avenue out, is now being excavated. Plumbers are now working on the present model curb and gutter men are practically through.

The Hurdall company received Monday a new R. H. Hurdall concrete mixer, similar to the present model in use. Both mixers will be put upon the Milton avenue job and the work rushed. It is expected that only one mixer will be put on the stretch until the Fourth avenue job is finished.

Moonshine Is Death to Two

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS] Superior—Moonshine took its toll of two more lives in Superior Sunday and Monday.

Joseph Newman, 37, and single, was found dead by the police yesterday in the rear of a barber shop. Newman's death was believed to have been caused by moonshine, and is being investigated by police.

Walter Kakek, 25, blacksmith helper at the Great Northern railway, was found dead this morning lying beside the railroad tracks in this city. No marks were found on the body which would indicate foul play, according to William Downs, deputy county coroner.

CITY MAY TRY OUT DUST PREVENTIVE

City Manager Henry Trautler is investigating into the advisability of buying a stock of calcium chloride from the county for use on dirt streets over which the heavy travel while the paving program is being carried on in the city. This compound is said to be adapted to keeping down the dust for several weeks much less cost than for oil.

The proposal is to have the property owners bear the cost of the treatment should they desire it on their street. It will be applied 3 cents a front foot, it is estimated.

JANESVILLE MAN ACHIEVES SUCCESS AS MANUFACTURER

From shoe repairer to owner of the largest carnival supply house in the United States is the record experienced by Charles Eckhart, former Janesville man.

Mr. Eckhart formerly operated a shoe repair shop in Janesville, and at one time was a moving picture machine operator here. About 10 years ago he left the city and joined a carnival as a motorhome rider.

For several years Eckhart followed this hazardous occupation until he finally accumulated enough money to purchase a small carnival company of his own. The company played only at small towns, but from a financial standpoint was highly successful.

Following the sale of the carnival company, the former Janesville man bought a small factory, manufacturing carnival supplies and equipment. This venture also proved successful and within a short period had expanded. Recently he purchased one of the largest plants of its type in the world, located in Port Washington, Wis. Warehouses are located in Milwaukee, Chicago and Memphis. Several hundred people are employed.

It also meets the demands from solidly democratic sections of the country that the tariff be reckoned on a scientific rather than a political basis. The south now has many interests that require a tariff to keep them on a fair competitive basis with Europe and other sections of the world.

DAVIS TO CHANGE TARIFF POSITION

Will Be for a Competitive Tariff on Non-Political Basis.

By ROBERT T. SMALL. Special correspondent. Washington—John W. Davis is to introduce an entirely new tariff bill in the coming presidential campaign. He will lead the democrats in a broad stand on this subject than they have ever taken before. It was extremely gratifying to Mr. Davis to find, after his nomination, that the platform adopted in Madison Square Garden coincided very largely with his own views.

Mr. Davis long has believed in what he calls a "competitive tariff." To his mind, the proper tariff for the American producer is one that will permit him to compete with the world on a fair competitive basis with Europe and other sections of the world.

It also meets the demands from solidly democratic sections of the country that the tariff be reckoned on a scientific rather than a political basis. The south now has many interests that require a tariff to keep them on a fair competitive basis with Europe and other sections of the world.

STREET CAR LINE

AGREES TO STAND 1924 PAVING BILL

After the agreement on the part of the city, The Janesville Traction company has already placed its stamp of approval on the compromise through the signature of its vice president and general manager, W. C. Sparks, Rockford.

Commissioner Suggested Pact
The street-car paving war was reported on by City Manager Traxler in his remarks introductory to the presentation of the five-year agreement. He told how the railroad commission, after a hearing, had denied the application of the Janesville Traction company to abandon its Washington street line because of the heavy expense for new rails and track paving entailed by the 1924 paving program.

"At the time of the hearing, one of the commissioners, L. E. Gottle, suggested that the city and traction company get together and agree on some settlement as to future paving on North Washington street, declaring that the company could not go on indefinitely paying for such costly improvements," explained the city manager.

"In view of the fact that it is proposed to continue the paving of North Washington street during the next year or so from Highland avenue north to the city limits, probably with county or federal aid, Mr. Gottle made the suggestion that such paving be done in two strips on either side of the street-car tracks. This would relieve the Traction company temporarily at least. The commissioner said the problem is being handled similarly in Madison and other cities."

The commission asserted City Attorney Roger G. Cunningham, "is even inclined to favor this scheme as against the other as it divides traffic and makes for greater safety. The plan is agreed to by all those who attend. It will not be up future paving on Washington street from Highland avenue to the end of the line."

The five-year agreement signed Monday night stipulates four conditions as follows:

1. That the Traction company will proceed to lay new rails on North Washington street, from Mineral Point to Highland avenue, to allow the paving of that section in full within this year.

2. That the company will meet its full paving obligations for this year as defined in Ordinance No. 77—that is it will pay for the extra cost of paving caused by its tracks being in the street.

3. That work may proceed at once.

4. That the city in return agrees not to force the traction company to pay for any more paving on North Washington street, north of Highland avenue, for a period of five years, and to use its efforts to see that the state and county do not attempt to compel paving between the tracks at its expense.

5. That the city does not forever waive its right to bring about the paving between the tracks.

north of Highland avenue but agrees to leave the question open for future determination.

"You will note," said Mr. Traxler, "that the agreement says nothing about paving on North Washington street south of Mineral Point avenue."

After Councilman C. Starr Atwood had been given full assurance that work would be started at once and that the future paving of North Washington street beyond Highland avenue would not be held up on account of the agreement, the measure was adopted upon motion of Councilman George A. Jacobs, seconded by Councilman Mrs. Emma H. Manning.

Best by Candlelight
An ordinance calling for the illumination of a half dozen candles, the meeting presented a most unique sight until the current went back on at 7:45 and the fellows were extinguished.

In the absence of President J. K. Jensen, who is on a tour to Glacier National park, City Manager Traxler was chosen to preside. Councilman William M. Jensen was the only other member absent.

With every light in the city hall out as a result of the severe storm, the meeting was opened by candlelight. Flashed about a table in the large council chamber in the flickering light of a half dozen candles, the meeting presented a most unique sight until the current went back on at 7:45 and the fellows were extinguished.

Sixty-six new city licenses were granted as follows: Electrical, 2; popcorn wagon, 1; milk dealer, 1; taxicab, 1; groceries and meat market, 15; poster advertising, 3; soda fountain, 1; gasoline pumps, 6; excavation in streets, 1; hotels, 2; taxi drivers, 7; bakeries, 3; cigars, 14; restaurants, 7.

Shinebarger, 116 Corn Exchange, was given permission to transfer his license to D. W. Fowler, who has bought his establishment.

What Constitutes "Away from Society?"

Clarence Darrow, criminal lawyer, following what must have been a program agreed upon between himself and the parents of the two youths charged with murder and kidnapping in Chicago, removed a part of the uncertainty which has been stirring the public for more than a month, when he stated that the defendants "should be permanently isolated from society."

Here again the public, interested in the administration of justice, wonders just what is meant by "permanent isolation." The prosecuting attorney, as becomes his office, seeks to have that permanent putting away from society by executing the defendants according to the criminal statutes of the state of Illinois. It is quite possible that the minds of people do not feel that the death penalty is sufficient punishment, that the long life term in prison, waiting years and years for death within stone walls, is preferable as an explanation of a crime and within the meaning of the term "permanent isolation."

But—and that is where again respect for law falls down—we have the pardon and the parole and commutation of sentence and powerful forces at work to secure immunity after a certain time has been spent within prison walls. These are what the public fears. You can hear that on all sides. "They would get out after a time."

In Milwaukee we have recently noticed a heinous crime committed by a youthful criminal leader who received his freedom from the governor of this state—J. J. Blaine. There is nothing about the prisoner, charged with being the vicious chief of an outlaw gang, that appeals to decency. His record was bad for years. But he had influence enough, for what reason it is unknown, to get a release from a ten year sentence so that he could go back to his trade of hold-up man, general gun fighter and attacker of women. Somehow we never quite fix the responsibility for such releases from even semi-permanent isolation. The governor, of course, defends his action on all these pardons and commutations. He may justify himself on any of them, but the public still doubts Illinois has a governor who has a facile pen when it comes to pardons and paroles, like the Wisconsin governor.

Therefore the "permanent isolation" does not find so great a response in the case of Leopold and Loeb as it would otherwise, had we less fear of the pardon and the parole. As has been said in the Gazette repeatedly, this case becomes of more importance that the usual capital offense because of the millions of dollars which have been available to defend the prisoners. The people have become something more than mere spectators. Their concern, above all other things, is the establishment and maintenance of justice—justice untarnished by sordid considerations of wealth and the technical trickery of the law.

One step at least has been taken toward this goal of justice—the plea of guilt. Later we might try, and discover by some sociological investigation what strange alchemy of environment and education should produce such a perverted mentality as is exhibited by these two children of golden millions.

THIS IS THE WAY THE TICKET LOOKS TO MANY DEMOCRATS—BRYAN.

Jay Page

It is a great tribute that is being paid today to the memory of Jay W. Page, county judge of Walworth county. Though a democrat in a strong republican county, he received a tremendous vote when a candidate last spring. His partisan political associations were of no weight. Above all, the people of his county who had known him all his life, knew him as an honest, upright citizen, who was not so stiffly good but that he had a heart. Even at the time of his election his friends knew he bore the mark of death and that he might not survive his term. But hope was made hopeless when he finally succumbed to the disease and was brought home to be put away in the little old burying ground at Honey Creek. Few men are given the qualities which in Jay Page, brought the real love and affection of his fellows. He was a fine lawyer—devoted to his profession, a student always and an able advocate. We join with our neighbor county, with which we are so closely allied in business and political considerations, in paying our respects to the man who has passed away and whose epitaph is written on so many hearts of his neighbors.

Do you think a cent is a small sum? "You cannot say anything with a cent any more" is a common remark. Yet every time when goes up one cent it means $1,300,000 to the Kansas farmer for the new wheat crop.

Enormous Cost of Fire

It distributed, the fire losses for 1923 in the United States would cost each person, big and little, old and young, $4.50 each. The staggering total is $508,000,000. If we were going to run for president we should certainly have a plank in the platform against fires. No candidate has taken into consideration this tremendous total. It would take the greater part of the 600,000,000 bushel wheat crop at a dollar a bushel to pay for the losses by fire. It would take a fourth of the corn crop. It would take all the tobacco crop of the nation. It would take the price of a fourth of the automobiles in America. Yet we go ahead each day being careless about fires and taking

THE FATE OF THE EAGLE

By FREDERICK J. HASKIN.

Washington, D. C.—The news that Alaska has declared war on eagles has brought forth a head-on side of protest from bird enthusiasts. "This means the beginning of the end of the American bald eagle," they say. "If the intensive and malicious slaughter of the species keeps up it will soon be as extinct as the dodo, and we will have to look about for a new national emblem—for surely no vanquished bird would be a fitting symbol for our ship of state."

Eagles have never been popular with farmers anywhere, owing to the birds' reputedly enormous appetite for domestic animals such as young calves, hogs and sheep. Every effort has been made, therefore, to discourage their comfortable roosts in the vicinity of farms. In most rural sections, they are shot at sight whenever possible, or fed with poisoned bait set out in traps. The last method is somewhat uncertain, however, since many supposedly deadly poisons have no injurious effect whatever upon eagles.

This persistent opposition has caused the American eagle—famously called "Old Baldy"—gradually to abandon the United States where the species was once widely prevalent and take refuge in Alaska, where hunting grounds are less restricted. Lately, however, even Alaska has turned against him. Complaining that eagles are carrying off their carefully reared silver foxes, as well as large quantities of valuable fish and game, the citizens of Alaska have opened hostilities on the birds.

The question now raised by the bird enthusiasts is whether or not the eagle is really of these alleged deplorable. They are inclined to believe that the popular idea that eagles frequently feed on domestic animals is erroneous, like the idea that they also carry off small children. There is no doubt, of course, that eagles do kill and eat a large number of wild game birds, but they likewise eat vast quantities of carrion, which is a habit helpful to man.

When the question was submitted to Dr. A. K. Fisher of the United States Biological Survey, he adopted a neutral attitude. "This at once looked bad for the eagle, because Dr. Fisher is one of our foremost champions of birds. Through his investigation of the stomachs of thousands of birds he has established the innocence of many species which have always been regarded as injurious to the interests of man."

Although it has been impossible to obtain many stomachs of eagles for investigation, the birds have been studied thoroughly by various members of the Biological Survey. This bald eagle lives partly after the manner of vultures, foraging itself to repelion when opportunity offers, the perhaps casting for days. Lack of food for a long period is apparently no grave handicap, for one individual under observation went without food for 32 days. The indigestible portions of its food are ultimately disgorged in the shape of pellets which resemble those of owls. These pellets have been of great value in solving the mystery of the eagle's diet.

"Fish seems to be the principal food of the bald eagle, and when obtainable is often preferred to anything else," says one of the investigators of the Survey. "The dead fish found along the shores of sea or lake or river, that the eagle catches by its own effort, and those of which it robs the crayfish are alike acceptable. In many places it obtains a good share of its food from the dead fish cast up by the waves."

"It is a regrettable fact that, after fish, birds constitute the most important part of the bald eagle's diet and sometimes furnish almost the entire food. The larger species, particularly of waterfowl and game birds, are preferred; song birds seem rarely if ever to be molested. Dead birds, especially waterfowl, whenever available are greedily devoured, as many observations prove."

Unfortunately, scientists point out, the bald eagle's fondness for mammal flesh leads it to attack domestic animals. This happens rarely to the larger kinds, though a sickly or weakening calf may once in awhile be killed; but sheep and hogs in some places suffer considerably. Full-grown healthy sheep are seldom killed, the attacks being confined principally to sick or weakly animals and to lambs. In places where large numbers of pigs are raised and allowed to run more or less wild the loss is large, the bird occasionally venturing boldly even close to human dwellings in pursuit of its prey.

While from this it may be seen that the bald eagle destroys species useful to man, it is not, according to the Biological Survey, as generally injurious as rumor makes it. Its attacks upon domestic animals are seldom made except when other food is unobtainable. Its destruction of ducks, geese and other waterfowl, all of which are available as food for man, is a much more serious matter, because it is more frequent. These are liabilities against it, but to its credit is the fact that it devours large quantities of carrion.

On the whole, the Biological Survey finds, the bald eagle may be considered more beneficial than otherwise, since much of its food is of little or no direct economic value, while the good it does more than compensate for its occasional nefarious deeds.

"Nevertheless," remarked Dr. Fisher, "if I owned a silver fox farm I also might resent the presence of eagles in the vicinity. The loss of a single silver fox is a serious thing. How much do the ladies pay for one skin—$150, isn't it?" Whenever the eagle becomes an economic danger, Dr. Fisher believes, people are quite justified in making war on it. "There is no reason why the Alaskans or any other group should stand by and permit eagles to rob them of their property. Furthermore, the eagle is too intelligent a bird to accept the fate of extinction without a long, hard battle. It is true that it is not as numerous as it once was and that its territory is becoming extremely limited. But it does not suffer any of the vigorous checks to its existence that other species do. Because of its size, strength and power of flight, its manner and place of living, this eagle has no formidable natural enemies. Man alone can defeat it."

Nestling on inaccessible crags or in the top of a very tall tree, wary and difficult of approach, with an eye always open for danger and slyly suspected things a wide berth, the bald eagle is very successful in protecting itself. Usually, it remains concealed in a tree, roosting and watching for some time in the spring it descends to the edge of a nest in the river, looking for fish. It is strictly a monogamous bird, the first mating occurring in an alliance, defensive and offensive, that is believed to last as long as both survive. But if one of the pair dies, the other soon secures a mate, so that there is no interruption in the responsibilities of the household.

As only two eagle offspring are produced each year, it is impossible for the species to increase at a rapid rate, even if protected as certain game birds are. A few states, which have benefited from the presence of the eagle, have passed laws protecting it, but for the most part it stands alone against its enemies, remarkably capable in defending itself. Individual eagles live to be very old—more than 100 years—and it is quite likely that the species also will enjoy a long life, in spite of man's prolonged offensive against it.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

THOUGHT

Take a little time to think just before you speak the phrase.
Which comes flying to your lips. Just remember that it pays.
Be as careful with yourself, as you would be with the task.
On which time and fortune wait. Pause just long enough to ask.
If there's wisdom in the speech, will it serve you once it's said.
After you have spoken out would you like that sentence read?

You are careful with your work, you don't blindly rush along.
Without thought for what you do, whether right or whether wrong.
You attempt before you start to look forward and to plan.
Why not do the same with you, why not make yourself a man?
Why not think about your life, why not give some thought to you.
Stopping now, and then to ask if this thing were good to do?

What will others say to hear from your lips some hasty speech?
Or to see you, blind to all, save the goal you hope is it worth the brand of shame? Would a real man do this?
Think you honor comes by chance or success by hit or miss?
No, true character is made, made by sacrifice.
Made by men who stop to think ere their records here they spill.

Is it honest, is it clean, is it what a man would do?
Should I want the world to know that I did it, once 'tis through?
Will it lift or drag me down, will it serve me or betray?
These are things to ask yourself when temptation comes your way.
Take the time to think it out and consider while you can.
For 'tis only careful thought that can ever make a man.

HOROSCOPE

WEDNESDAY, JULY 23, 1924.

Astrologers read the morning hours of this day as very fortunate, for Saturn and the Sun are both in malefic aspect. Venus is in kindly way in the afternoon.

"This is the time in which to exercise the greatest caution in making decisions or in taking any sort of important initiative.
It is a day under which no one should risk antagonizing friends or foes, since both will be difficult to deal with."

Labor difficulties of various sorts may vex many parts of the United States at this time when women may have special cause for grievance.

Saturn bodes ill for aged persons in public life and there is certainly evidence in the position of the stars giving warning of many deaths among the elderly who die today.

Real estate men may find business affairs exceedingly quiet at this time, but in many places there is to be a boom within the next twelve months, the stars prophesy.

Those who depend upon employment should "not make any effort to find the right sort of positions while the Sun frowns on the activities of humankind."

There is a sign read as threatening to the ambitions of men holding high political offices, for the Sun is adverse to them today.

The eclipse of the Sun, July 31, which "will obscure less than one-fifth of the Sun's surface, is read as unfortunate for royalty and may forebode the violent death of a prince."

One of the indications of retail business in large cities appears to presage the scattering of small shops in residence districts and less patronage of big stores.

The stars declare that bigness in the United States, the prevailing tendency everywhere, has reached an expansion which precedes a general disintegration.

This aspect giving hope of less congestion will benefit the small merchant at first, astrologers forecast.

Persons whose birthdate it is, should be extremely cautious in all business transactions in the coming year. Do not speculate.

Children born on this day may have many vicissitudes in their careers. Those subjects of Leo will have the hardest possibilities of success, but they must be guided carefully.

HISTORY OF TODAY

A special session of the supreme court of California opens at Los Angeles today for the hearing of the appeal of the state against the state and jurisdiction of alien land legislation in California.

The Iowa legislature has been summoned to meet in special session today to consider the act on ratification of the child labor amendment to the constitution of the United States.

TODAY'S ANNIVERSARIES.
1812—British and allies, under the Duke of Wellington, totally defeated the French near Salamanca, Spain.
1824—John Cummins Shea, who wrote a monumental history of the Catholic church in America, born in New York City. Died at Philadelphia, Pa., July 21, 1924.
1826—George W. Jones, first United States senator from Iowa, died at Dubuque, Ia. Born at New York City, July 21, 1826.
1920—Senator Warren G. Harding accepted the republican presidential nomination.

President Harding and party arrived at Sitka, Alaska.
Yoshioka Wood consecrated as permanent American war memorial.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAYS.
Joseph L. Bristow, republican states senator from Kansas, born in Wolfe county, Ky., 63 years ago today.
Joseph J. Linnes, pitcher of the St. Louis National league baseball team, born at Clayton, O., 31 years ago today.

LOOKING BACKWARD

FORTY YEARS AGO

July 22, 1884—General John A. Logan, republican candidate for vice president, passed through here by train last night on the way to Minneapolis to attend the national convention of the Grand Army. Mrs. M. T. Lane and children, Baltimore, who are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Britton, arrived on the same train.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

July 22, 1894—The annual Scotch games under the management of the Caledonian society will be held on the fair grounds Friday. Last year 4000 people were present. In addition to dancing and bagpipe playing, the committee this year will introduce "tilting at the ring," a horse-back sport.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

July 22, 1904—Over a thousand members of the Knights of Columbus, with their families, from here and Beloit held a joint picnic at Yock Park Thursday. In a baseball game, Janesville men defeated a Beloit team 11-1. Outdoor vaudeville during the summer will probably be introduced here this year.

TEN YEARS AGO

July 22, 1914—The resignation of Miss Agnes C. Anderson as city nurse was accepted by the council last night. Her position will be taken by Miss Elizabeth Joyce. New officers of the local launch club will be elected at a meeting to be held Friday night. R. J. Baur is now president, and Charles L. Filice secretary.

Personal Health Service

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Noted Physician and Author.

JUST WHAT IS INDIGESTION?

Speaking of a certain form of heart disease and the difficulty of diagnosing it in the early stage, John May, an English authority, says:
"The only safe course is to view with suspicion every one over middle age whose 'indigestion' is induced by effort or exposure to cold, and which fades away on the cessation of stress or when the patient gets comfortably warm. Such a history calls for careful examination of the whole cardiovascular system."

The whole cardiovascular system means the heart and all the blood-vessels—arteries, veins and capillaries.
Note that this author, whose writings were quoted by even the great doctor, makes use of the word "indigestion" to mean a certain condition of the stomach, and not the general term "indigestion" as commonly used by physicians. He simply enclosed the word "indigestion" in quotation marks. That indicates clearly enough that the notion of "indigestion" as the patient's, not the physician's.

Cardio-vascular disease is what ails the patient in only a few of the vast number of cases of "indigestion." I want to explain this as well as I can first by making certain that everybody understands there is no such condition as "indigestion." You see, that is my regular method. Before I try to explain a common complaint I endeavor to have a mutual understanding with the reader that there is no such disease, and with that agreed to, we usually get along very well. MISTRESS WILDING:

A ROMANCE, BY RAFAEL SABATINI.

(Author of "Scaramouche," "Captain Blood," "Fortune's Fool," etc.)

It was while this news was going round that Sunderland—in a moment of panic—at last vouchsafed an answer to Mr. Wilding's letter, and he vouchsafed it in person to take as Wilding—particularly since this news was beginning to lose all hope. He came one evening to Mr. Wilding's lodgings in Covent Garden, unattended and unaccompanied, and he remained seated with the Duke's ambassador for nearly an hour, at the end of which he entrusted Mr. Wilding with a letter for the Duke, very brief but entirely to the point, which expressed him Monmouth's most devoted servant.

"You may well judge, sir," he had said at parting, "that I do not such a letter as I should entrust to any man."

Mr. Wilding had bowed gravely, and gravely he had expressed him, such measures as will ensure against its falling into any but the hands for which it is intended.

"As I am a man of honour, you may be sure," Mr. Wilding solemnly promised, "with your lordship give me three lines above your signature that will save me from molestation, and will ensure the preservation of this letter."

"I had already thought of that," was Sunderland's answer, and he placed before Mr. Wilding a sheet of writing signed and sealed which enjoined all, strictly, in the King's name to suffer the bearer to pass and repass and to offer him no hindrance.

On that they shook hands and parted. Sunderland returned to Whitehall and his obedience to the King James whom he was ready to serve as soon as he saw profit for himself in that act. Mr. Wilding returned to Somerset to the King James in whom his faith was scant, indeed, but with whom his fortunes were inseparably bound.

Meanwhile, Monmouth was back in Bridgewater, his second occupation of which town was not being looked upon with universal favour. The inhabitants had suffered enough already from his first visit; his return there, after the Phillips Norton affair, of which such gross exaggerations had been reached London, and which, in point of fact, had been little better than a drawn battle—had been looked upon with dread by some, with disfavor by others, and with dismay by not a few who viewed in this an augury of failure.

Now Sir Rowland Blake, who since his pursuit of Mr. Wilding and Trinchard on the occasion of their flight from Taunton had—in spite of his failure on that occasion—been more or less in the service of Albemarle and the royal army, and in this indisposition towards Monmouth of so many of Bridgewater's inhabitants, great possibilities of profit to himself.

It was at Lupton House, the guest of his friend Richard Westmacott, and the open spirit of Ruth, entirely ignoring the circumstances that gave way to the wife of Mr. Wilding—this to the infinite chagrin of Miss Horton, who saw all her scheming likely to go for nothing.

In his heart of hearts it was a matter of not the slightest consequence to Sir Rowland whether James Stuart or James Scott occupied the throne of England. His own affairs gave him more than enough to think of, and these disturbances in the West were very welcome to him, for they kept him from the part of his London creditors. It happens, however, very commonly that enmity to an individual will lead to enmity to the cause which that individual espouses. Thus may it have been with Sir Rowland. His hatred of Wilding and his desire to see Wilding destroyed had made him a zealous partizan of the royal cause, and Richard Westmacott, easily swayed and overborne by the town rakes, who were all too ready to see in Richard the embodiment of all that is splendid and enviable in man, had become practically the barometer's tool, now that he had abandoned Monmouth's cause. Sir Rowland had not considered it the least of the duties of his name and station to discharge in Bridgewater certain functions that made him more or less a spy. And so reliable had been the information he had sent to the Duke and Albany during Monmouth's first occupation of the town, that he had won by now their complete confidence.

The second occasion of his popularity with many of those who earlier—if Duke—had been partisans of the Duke, swelled the number of locally inclined people who sided with a scheme by which Sir Rowland with a scheme by which at a blow he might snuff out the rebellion.

This scheme involved the capture of the Duke, and the reward of success should mean far more to Blake than the five thousand pounds at which the value of the Duke's head had already been fixed by Parliament. He needed a tool for this, and he even thought of Westmacott and Lupton House, but afterwards preferred a Mr. Newington, who was in better case to assist him.

This Newington, an exceedingly prosperous merchant and one of the richest men perhaps in the whole West of England, looked with extreme disfavor upon Monmouth, whose advent had paralyzed his industries to an extent that was costing him a fine round sum of money weekly.

He was now in alarm lest the town of Bridgewater should be made to pay dearly for having harbored the Protestant Duke's ultimate pretensions; and that he, as one of the town's most prominent and prosperous citizens, might be amongst the heaviest sufferers in spite of his neutrality. This was mainly the observed because it was hardly safe in that disaffected town for a man to proclaim himself a loyalist.

Dinner Stories

The artist was painting a picture of the ruined castle on the hill. He was watched with great interest by an old countryman, who stood silently by him for almost an hour.

"Will you please tell me if my nine weeks old baby is underweight?" He weighed nine pounds and 12 ounces. He weighed seven when he was born. I give him 16 ounces of oatmeal water, 16 of milk, three tablespoons of malt sugar, four and one-half ounces of rice, three hours. He is very contented."

Answer: "The baby is an excellent weight, but is being overfed for his age and weight. This is a better formula: Thirteen ounces of milk, 15 of boiled water (he doesn't need both oatmeal water and so much malt sugar) and three tablespoons of the maltose. Put this into seven bottles."

Remember the baby is only a bit over two months old and it is never too late to overfeed. I shall be glad to send you advice on constipation if you will send me a self-addressed and stamped envelope.

Mrs. J. A. K. writes: "There is no charge for anything in this department. If you want any of the leaflets offered they may be had for a self-addressed and stamped envelope, in which I will return them to you."

Your approximate date is about Sept. 4.

Mrs. G. K. G. writes: "What is a good dusting powder to be used when the baby's skin chaps easily? Must wet diapers be washed every time, or can they be dried in the sun and used again?"

Answer: "Here is a good homemade dusting powder. Two parts cornstarch and one part boracic acid powder. Sift together several times."

Remove wet diapers immediately and wash and rinse and sun thoroughly before using again. Sometimes strong soaps imperfectly rinsed from the diaper will cause chafing.

Parasite will not cause a hair to grow on face. It really has the opposite effect, as those who used it for bleaching whole heads of hair have found to be so.

Warred A. G. B.—I do not know what is in the creams you mention. You had better not use any cream on your face rather than take any brand that is made up to sell so cheaply.

My dear every body, I have a few times. This is made by mixing in equal parts pitch and myrrh. Wear gloves over night and remove mixture in morning by dissolving it with any kind of oil.

You can also overcome the trouble by improving the circulation in the finger tips. Massage fingers on the palms and back of hand, continuing the motions up into the forearms to the elbow. Vigorous daily buffing of the nails will improve the circulation.

Heart and Home Problems

Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

THE ETERNAL MOTHER-IN-LAW. Mrs. Thompson—I have been married eight years, and have a boy and two girls. What time we have not lived in the house with in-laws we have been in the house with in-laws. I don't believe would be good to them if I left in her care. But she worships the boy and has him so I can hardly do a thing with him. I have two little sisters even she says before him they ought to let him alone and doesn't blame him. She also says it doesn't do any good to whip children, that it just makes them worse. I don't mind her saying these things if she just wouldn't say them before the children. I love my husband to move out of the house, but then she takes me away from him. I don't feel this is fair just because he is the baby. Have parents, too, and they are not fair to him. I have two little sisters even she says before him they ought to let him alone and doesn't blame him. She also says it doesn't do any good to whip children, that it just makes them worse. I don't mind her saying these things if she just wouldn't say them before the
